Introduction

This document is aimed at helping practitioners who work with children and their families to understand the key terminology used within child protection legislation, statutory guidance and practice.

Safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children- The Children Act 2004 (1.20) defines 'safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children' as:

- Protecting children from maltreatment;
- Preventing impairment of children's health and development;
- Ensuring that children are growing up in circumstances consistent with the provision of safe and effective care; and
- Enabling children to have optimum life chances and to enter adulthood successfully.

Abuse and neglect are forms of maltreatment of a child. Somebody may abuse or neglect a child by inflicting harm, or by failing to act to prevent harm. Children may be abused in a family, or in an institutional or community setting, by those known to them or, more rarely, by a stranger, for example, via the internet. They may be abused by an adult or adults, or another child or children.

CAFCASS - The Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS) looks after the interests of children involved in family proceedings. It works with children and their families, and then advises the courts on what it considers to be in the children's best interests. CAFCASS only works in the family courts. Examples of matters that may be taken to family courts are: when parents who are separating or divorcing can't agree on arrangements for their children; an adoption application; when children are subject to an application for care or supervision proceedings by Children's Services. Social workers employed by CAFCASS are appointed as Family Court Advisors (FCAs).

Care Order (CO) – A statutory order made under Section 31(1) of the Children Act, placing the child in the care of the Local Authority. The Local Authority shares parental responsibility with the parent.

Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) - Specialist multi-disciplinary team to provide assessment and treatment for children and young people with emotional/mental health issues.

Child protection is a part of safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children. It is a specific activity that is undertaken to protect a child who is suffering, or is likely to suffer, significant harm. All agencies should proactively aim to safeguard and promote the welfare of children so that the need to take action to protect children from harm is reduced.

Child Protection Conference - A formal inter-agency meeting, following an enquiry under section 47 of the Children Act which decides whether the child is at continuing risk of significant harm and whether the child is to be subject to a child protection plan.

Child Protection Plan - The aim of the plan is to: - safeguard the children from further harm, promote the child's health and development; provided it is in the best interests of the child, to support the family and wider family members to promote the welfare of the child.

Child Protection Review Conferences -These ensure that children who are the subject of a child protection plan remain monitored and that their individual child protection plan remains valid. The first conference should be held within 3 months of the initial conference. Further reviews should take place within 6 months of each other for as long as the child's name remains subject of a child protection plan.

Child Social Work Assessment – Previously, children’s social work assessments were carried out as part of two separate processes, the initial and core assessment. The Child Social Work Assessment removes the distinction between the two so that all families are subject to a single assessment that is proportionate to their needs. Social Workers have 45 working days to complete the assessment, however it is expected that the majority of assessments will take less than 45 days to complete.

Children in Need - Children are defined as being ‘in need’, under section 17 of the Children Act 1989. They are those whose vulnerability is such that they are unlikely to reach or maintain a satisfactory level of health or development, or their health and development will be significantly impaired, without the provision of services [section 17(10)] . This includes children who are disabled.

Critical factors to be taken into account in deciding whether a child is in need under the Children Act 1989 centre upon what will happen to a child’s health or development without services being provided, and the likely effect the services will have on the child’s standard of health and development. Local authorities have a duty to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in need.

The Assessment of Children in Need and their Families (the Assessment Framework, published in 2000) sets out arrangements for undertaking assessment processes in determining whether a child is “in need” under the Act. It is the basis upon which primarily social workers will prioritise a child’s need for supportive help or services, though these are not necessarily confined to services provided by the local authority.

- provide adequate food, clothing and shelter (including exclusion from home or abandonment);
- protect a child from physical and emotional harm or danger;
- ensure adequate supervision (including the use of inadequate carer-givers); or
- ensure access to appropriate medical care or treatment.
- Neglect may also include neglect of, or unresponsiveness to, a child’s basic emotional needs.

Sexual Abuse – involves forcing or enticing a child or young person to take part in sexual activities, not necessarily involving a high level of violence, whether or not a child is aware of what is happening. The activities may involve physical contact, including assault by penetration (for example, rape or oral sex) or non-penetrative acts such as masturbation, kissing, rubbing and touching outside of clothing. They may also include non-contact activities, such as involving children in looking at, or in the production of, sexual images, watching sexual activities, encouraging children to behave in sexually inappropriate ways, or grooming a child in preparation for abuse (including via the internet). Sexual abuse is not solely perpetrated by adult males. Women can also commit acts of sexual abuse, as can other children.

Significant Harm – The Children Act 1989 introduced the concept of significant harm as the threshold that justifies compulsory intervention in family life in the best interests of the child. Local authorities have a statutory duty to make enquiries to decide whether they should take action to safeguard or promote the welfare of a child who is suffering or is likely to suffer significant harm.

Sometimes significant harm arises from a single traumatic event. It may otherwise arise from a combination or series of events (acute or long-standing) which when seen in the context of others, means that the threshold for significant harm has been reached. To understand and identify significant harm, it is necessary to consider:

- the nature of harm, in terms of maltreatment or failure to provide adequate care;
- the impact on the child's health and development;
- the child's development within the context of their family and wider environment;
- any special needs, such as a medical condition, communication impairment or disability, that may affect the child's development and care within the family;
- the capacity of the parents to adequately meet the child's needs; and; the wider and environment family context.

There are no absolute criteria upon which to base a judgement of what constitutes significant harm; when determining whether the threshold for significant harm is met, professionals should take into consideration the:

- severity of the maltreatment; including the degree and extent of physical harm;
- duration and frequency of abuse and neglect;
- extent of premeditation; and
- presence or degree of threat, coercion, sadism, bizarre or unusual elements.

A court may make a Care Order (committing the child to the care of the local authority) or a supervision order (putting the child under the supervision of a social worker, or a probation officer) in respect of a child if it is satisfied that:

- the child is suffering, or is likely to suffer, significant harm; and
- the harm or likelihood of harm is attributable to a lack of adequate parental care or control.

Some children live in family and social circumstances where their health and development are neglected. For them the corrosive elements of emotional, physical and, sometimes, sexual maltreatment cause impairment to the extent of constituting significant harm. In each case it is necessary to consider the implications of maltreatment alongside the family's strengths and supports.

Where the question of whether harm suffered by a child is significant¹ turns on the child's health and development, this should be compared with that which could reasonably be expected of a similar child.

Strategy Meeting - Meeting between the social services and police and other relevant agencies to plan an investigation under Section 47. Sometimes this can be a strategy discussion by phone.

Working Together to Safeguard Children - Guidance published by the Department for Education setting out how all agencies and professionals should work together to promote children's welfare and protect them from abuse and neglect.

Youth Offender Service (YOS formally known as YOT) - Provides a range of services for young people who have committed offences or are at risk of committing offences. They are usually multi-disciplinary teams, providing reports for court and activating various orders imposed by the court to help prevent re-offending and protect the public.
